The practice of Sufism is the intention to go towards the Truth, by means of love and devotion. This is called the tarīqah, the spiritual path or way towards God.
The sūfi is one who is a lover of Truth, who by means of love and devotion moves towards the Truth, towards the perfection which all are busy seeking. As recognized by Sufi's gradually, the sūfi is taken away from all except the Truth.

Impact on India

Sufism exercised considerable influence on the Hindu society and the Sufi saints attracted the attention of the Hindus. The influence of Islam was also noticed in economy, society, language and literature and art and architecture. The Muslim rulers of India were great builders.

Principles

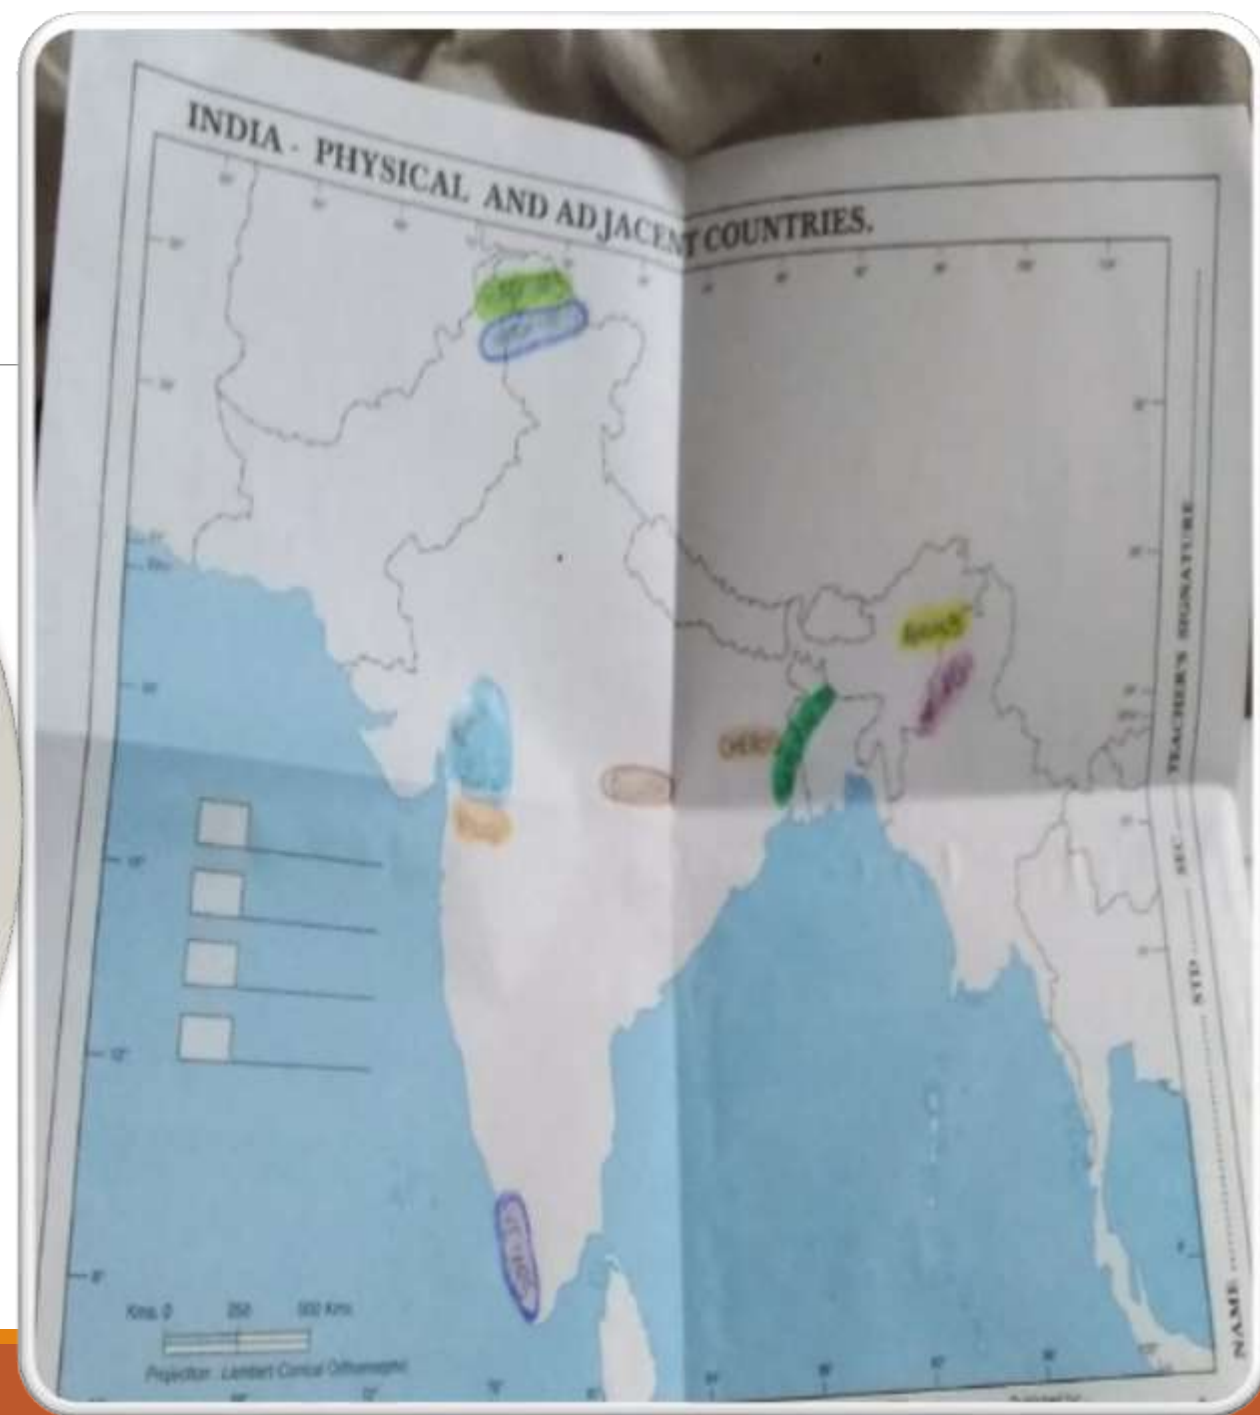

The basic principles of Sufism were given by Mulla Khalid al-Ghazwani, who was one of the greatest Sufi thinkers of the world. He said: "The Sufi is one who is devoted to God and who is devoted to the Prophet Muhammad (S). They said to recite the name of the Almighty (Allah) by tongue. Eight Principles were enunciated and called by all the forty names (but known as the 100 Names) and they are: (1) Nur al-Qalb (Custodian of the Heart) (2) Nur al-Hadi (The Guide) (3) Nur al-Kamil (The Perfect) (4) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (5) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (6) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (7) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (8) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (9) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor) (10) Nur al-Muhsin (The Benefactor).

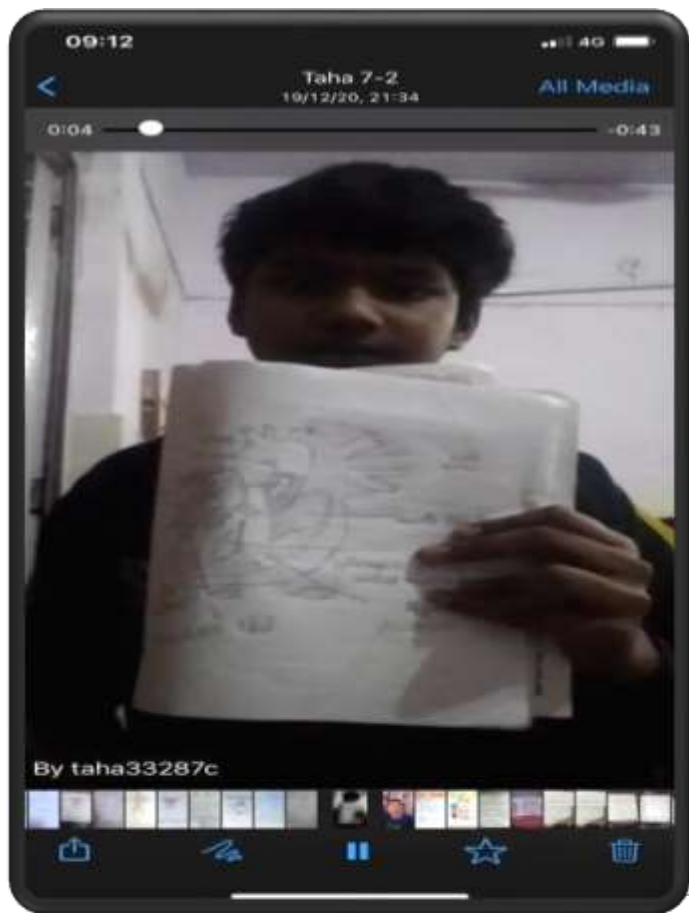

Origin

The very early period of Islam witnessed it as a religion of reconciliation and concern with people being gently persuaded rather than being coerced into it. However, the rigidity and impious rule of the Umayyad immediately following the first four caliphs, created such political and social conditions that many Muslims became disgusted and adopted to asceticism and a life of seclusion to seek peace of soul. Gradually the focus shifted from material wealth to the lack of desire for possession i.e. a true detachment from all worldly things. Most of them were, however, orthodox Muslims in their beliefs and practices. They had yet not distinguished spirituality from the religion and had great emphasis on the teachings of Qur'an and Traditions.
